Ongoing dyspeptic symptoms despite PPI therapy

This gentleman contacted me by telephone back in May of last year telling me that he has had history of post-prandial acid reflux with no alarm systems. At that time we talked about life measures to reduce his acid reflux and I recommended OTC Gaviscon. However he has contacted me today to tell me that you kindly prescribed omeprazole towards the end of last year and although initially improved his symptoms on stopping his symptoms returned again. I note that he is on [NAME] which may be a contributing factor. However in view of his ongoing dyspeptic symptoms and also tells me occasionally he feels a heaviness in the distal oesophagus I think it would be prudent to do out a gastroscopy which I have organised for him at Romsey Hospital, for myself to carry out to ensure continuity of care, and he will be having this done on 27 th August.

I will review him in the Outpatient Department following the above and keep you informed of his progress. I have advised him to stop his omeprazole two weeks prior to gastroscopy. However he can take [NAME] and Rennie's during this period.

Yours sincerely
